

Athena Military Women's Initiative

The Athena Military Women's Initiative is designed to help former military Women transition into civilian life. In fulfillment of our mission to build powerful women personally, professionally, and politically, the program strives to first identify the needs of women who served. Once those needs are established, the program can offer mentoring workshops and/or provide basic material needs when needed.

Athena Military Women's Initiative workshops:

- Introduction: Getting to know military women and what programs they want.
- Resume Building: Creating a civilian resume based on military experiences.
- Dress for Success: What to wear to get a job.
- Resources: What government and community organizations have available to help in transition?
- Budgeting/finance: spending and saving money wisely.

Athena Military Women's Initiative meeting basic needs:

- Contact Women's Centers at Veterans Administration (V.A.) Centers.
- Contact Women veterans organizations
- Clothing, coats, etc. drives
- Toiletries donations
- Adopt a former military woman's family
